OF CORRUPTION

"Why mince words? Every man in this body knows that the election of Senator Stephenson was brought about by the reckless, extravagant and wrongful use of money. You may gloss it over, smile about it, condone it, but the fact still exists—the seat was purchased."

Senator Kenyon, in a scathing denunciation of the methods alleged to have been used by the veteran Wisconsin senator in his campaign for his seat, made the foregoing part of a vigorous speech in the senate recently. The Iowa senator, with Senators Clapp, Jones, Kern and Lea, dissented from the majority report of the committee, which investigated the election and held that charges of bribery and corruption had not been proved. Senator Kenyon denounces the election as "an organized riot of corruption," indefensible and "tainted at its fountain."

Organized Riot of Corruption.
"The methods employed would not have dignified a candidacy for county sheriff," he said. "The election was the result of an organized riot of corruption, a debauchery of the electorate by treating, employment, purchases of newspaper influence and other despicable methods, creating, by money, political enthusiasm and securing political support. Such practices should cease and cease now. Otherwise the canker of corruption will eat close to the heart of the republic."

"The only real danger that can ever threaten this nation in the future is corruption in the body politic. It is the child of avarice and special privilege. It can exist only when the electorate is indifferent. They may be slow to be aroused, but when once aroused the American people will drive the money changers from the temple and smite the arrogant demon of corruption wherever its vile head may appear."

Seats in the United States senate, Mr. Kenyon declared did not belong to the highest bidder. If seats were to be bought and sold as merchandise, then, he foretold, would come the decadence of the republic.
Declares the Seat Purchased.
"If men can be sent here by money," he continued, "others can be defeated by money, and there are men in this chamber who know what it means to have the purses of great interests opened to defeat them. We are marching on; no one need be discouraged; the people, not money, are going to rule in this country. We are advancing. We at least have had an investigation, a thorough one, and as the lid has been lifted men have been sickened by the foul odors that came from the caldron of corruption. There is no divinity that surrounds a seat in this body acquired by such methods, no reason to talk in whispers concerning it, but boldly to brand it, as it is, a purchased seat."

"Above any other question is the great one of public policy. A man who turns loose this enormous sum of money to secure a seat here is not, as a matter of public policy, entitled to remain a member of this body. Even were the election legal he should be expelled."
